TOOK CHANCES ON SLUSH.

Mrs. Vogel and Daughter Jumped from Their Runaway Buggy.

Mrs. Henry Vogel, wife of the wealthy Williamsburg tin manufacturer, and her daughter. Annie, are confined to their home, 208 Keap street, Brooklyn, BLUBBED THE CHICKEN THIEF to-day from shock and slight bruises with which they fortunately escaped while buggy riding yesterday afternoon. On Lee avenue, near Rodney street, their horse became frightened at a snow-sweeper and ran away down Lee avenue. Fearing serious injury, if not worse, at Wilson street Mrs. Vogel deliberately leaped into a big pile of snow she had espied on the corner.

A block further on, at Division street, Miss Annie exactly repeated the tactics of her mother, alighting in another pile of snow, which, however, was principally slush. Aside from a shaking up and slight bruises neither was injured. The driver stuck to the buggy, and after running a few blocks further the horse was stopped.
